SUPPOSE you are driving a major boulevard and are forced to stop when a traffic signal swings against you.

You glance around. On your right is a huge office building, housing many professional tenants. On your left is a department store. Across the street is a market, while diagonally opposite is a motion picture theater. Overhead flies a droning airplane. A few blocks away is a residential district.

"Torrance products," says every one of these!

Change the scene. You are now traveling along the eastern seaboard. You pass a floral shop. You see a five-and-ten-cent store in the distance, while opposite you is a hardware and sporting goods shop.

"Torrance products," again shrieks each of them.

Travel to the far ends of the world. View any kind of industry in which machinery plays the slightest part. See oil developments, even at the antipodes from this city.

"Torrance products," goes out the cry from the wilderness.

World Counts on Torrance
FOR THIS city, 25 years young, has cast an indelible mark on world trade. Nowhere that civilization has reached can one travel without running across Torrance products in some form or other. And, by reciprocal reasoning, all the world contributes its raw materials for use in Torrance industries.

Torrance draws raw materials from all over the world, converts them into products for the use of man, and ships them into every nook and cranny!

When the "outsider" thinks of Torrance he conceives just one or two things, steel and oil. But he probably has no idea of the fact that the brick in half of Southern California's buildings, flowers in New York markets, abalone novelties and fishing lures in stores all over the nation, rubber specialties for all kinds of purposes had their birth in Torrance.

In All Machinery
INFLUENCE of Torrance extends to almost every kind
